Sometimes, being surrounded by familiar people, often elders, who discuss my life condition right in front of me makes me think, “Seriously? You want to talk about this here, in front of me?” I know it’s very common after all these many years and I’ve even gotten used to it, but it still stings. Especially when they look me up and down, it makes me feel awkward. However, no matter where I am, to be honest, I often become the center of attention, particularly at family functions. I appreciate their concern and the bit of sympathy their love shows 🥰; I must deserve it. I want people to treat me special, and there’s nothing wrong with that 😊. Just a small request: “Konjam antha pakkam poi discuss pannunga 😂; don’t suddenly give me that intense look. 😞”
